Note

This reference establishes United States federal policy governing participation in the development and use of voluntary consensus standards and conformity assessment activities.

Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular A-119 implements the standards policy established by the National Technology Transfer and Advancement Act \(NTTAA\) and provides guidance for federal agencies on selecting, participating in, and applying voluntary consensus standards.

FDIS-RA cites this policy to provide context for:

- Adoption of voluntary consensus standards
- Participation in standards development organisations
- Preference for open, consensus-based standards
- Interoperability across agencies and jurisdictions
- Standards-based architectural governance
- Conformity assessment activities

OMB Circular A-119 supports the use of standards developed through recognised standards development organisations while preserving the authority of federal agencies to determine how those standards are applied within their statutory responsibilities.
